Located on the east side of Unionville Road in the small community of Unionville is the Marvin Cornish house, a story-and-a-half frame dwelling that faces west with the gable roof oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1900, this story and a half frame dwelling is underpinned with concrete block piers and it is sheathed with a layer of asphalt shingles over German style siding. Attached to the back of the house is a single-story rear kitchen wing.

The west (main) elevation is a two-bay facade with a side entrance and an adjacent six-over-six sash window. The door is partially glazed. Covering the entrance bay is a shed roofed porch supported on square posts. The half story is pierced by small three-over-three sash windows. Rising from the center of the house in an internal brick stack.

The gable ends of the main house are pierced by six-over-six sash windows, and the eaves extend slightly over the wall surface.

Covering the back of the front block is a single-story one-room plan kitchen wing.

The interior was not seen.
